used for her community work. Mrs. Otto Kellish gave a report of her relief work and told of the project she has started, making hats and mittens for the children in Viet Nam. She urged all to come and help sew on Thursday, September 14th, at 10 A.M. in the Grange Hall. These articles will be made from warm coat material. This appeal is for non-Grangers too. You are also urged to come and help with this worthy project. The cold weather in Viet Nam starts in October and it is her desire to get a good supply started to them. Just bring a sandwich, and coffee and dessert will be served by the committee. For more information, please phone Mrs. Kellish, 758-3896.

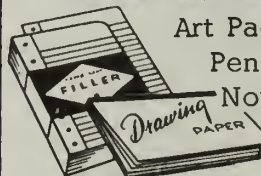

Mr. Kellish reported on the success of the annual Fair and thanked all who helped..

The worthy master announced September 21st will be the installation of the 1968 officers with Deputy Alton Bailey and his suite conducting the installation ceremony.

ONE HULL OF A STORY!

With a single-edge razor blade, you can build an eight foot long boat that weighs just 27 lbs. less than its outboard motor.

The secret? Plyfoam in sheet form, which weighs only 3 lbs. per cubic foot and will not absorb water because of its closed cell structure. This same material, an expanded polyvinyl chloride foam, is used for a wide variety of industrial purposes.

Now Plyfoam gives you clear sailing because it's unsinkable. The flat inside sections of the hull are glassed before cutting and assembly (flat glassing is a cinch for beginners). Inside joints and the usual problems with overlapping are resolved after assembly with fiber glass tape.

Most important, the sandwich method of construction for a Polyfoam boat requires only sheets on a flat floor as shown in cutting layout. Run a strip of masking tape along each joint to prevent the sheets from separating and to stop the resin from leaking through the joints.

Now, with the help of your first mate, turn all six sheets over together so the tapes are on the bottom. Then apply the resin and glass.
When resin and glass are applied, you can rest assured that the strength of the joint is as great as that of any other part of the plyfoam.

Trace your patterns on glassed Plyfoam. Then cut along the lines with a saber saw.

After the resin cures, assemble the parts to form the hull. In his feature story on how to Young and old boat makers will have no trouble turning this lightweight hull upside down. So do it, and then drape the rest of the cloth over the Plyfoam hull. In cutting the cloth, add about two inches to the perimeter for the outside bottom; allow sides and transom cloth a two-inch overhang at the ends and bottom, but flush at the top edge.

COMPUTERS IN ACTION!

A computer giving you a complete physical examination? It's a reality in at least one U.S. city right now—and doctors are freed for work that makes better use of their skills. But, say Dun & Bradstreet experts, this gawky electronic genius is just a hunk of metal without a talented core of men and women behind it! The real result of computerization has actually been more and better jobs for more people.

Next the seats. First, round the edges off the foam with sandpaper or a file. After the seats are cured, pin them in place with annular nails. The hull will take shape once the center seat is in place; the front and rear bottom will curve up slightly. Use a four-inch fiber glass tape on inside corners along the bottom and transom sides. Double layers will do nicely at seat edges and seat supports, while a triple layer should be added at the stem.

After the main glassing, you add the breast-hook, transom and oar lock pads. Then screw the guard and sheer clamp together with 1 1/4" #8 screws--after which you wash the entire hull with detergent to remove the waxy residue from the resin. Now comes the paint job. This completed, add oar locks, and maybe even an outboard motor, and you have your boat!

But that's not all to this sea-worthy tale: with Plyfoam sheets, you can also make a fishing box for bait, an ice chest, a flying bridge, your kid's sandbox, your wife's flower box, and a skimmer for surfboarding. If you write to Plyfoam, Inc., Vanderbilt Industrial Park, Hauppauge, New York, 11787, they will send more ideas for do-it-yourself projects-

LETTER FROM COMMUNITY BAND

Mattapoisett Selectmen have received a letter for Paul H. Alves of the Mattapoisett Community Band stating that the band has completed a most successful season. The band played 8 concerts and attendance was excellent. Special recognition was given to Police Woman Ingram and to Mr. Robert Carrier for time and equipment for band use. The band also expressed its thanks to the Board of Selectmen for splendid understanding and co-operation.

IS THERE AN OBJECTIVE IN VIET NAM?

Since Congress abdicated its responsibility in the declaring of war, the United States has been involved in a series of ill conceived, half hearted efforts to jump in and defend the world from Communism. A stand against Communist aggression might be admirable except that there is no will to win. In Korea, we sacrificed the lives of thousands of American fighting men by fighting a war on the terms of the enemy, with obsolete weapons to match theirs and giving the opponents a privileged sanctuary. In the end, we ended where we started - except for our maimed and our dead.

In Cuba, the terrible miscalculation of the administration and the disgraceful defeat of the invasion which resulted cost the United States a disaster which apparently we are to live with forever. Cuba is a Communist bastion and seemingly must be maintained as such by a Kennedy-Khrushchev agreement.

In Viet Nam, we are supposed to be advisers. Once again, we ask our young men to fight a war which is not admitted. We require them to fight on the enemy's ground, with the enemy's weapons with a privileged sanctuary and, in addition, not to win because that might upset the Communist Chinese. The American people are due an explanation. If the United States is not pushing for a military victory what will we settle for in Viet Nam. If the United States is trying for a military victory what will the Johnson administration consider a "victory"? Will a stalemate be a "victory"? Will an agreement to negotiate be a "victory"? Outside of a vague, "We will continue", not a single clue has been forthcoming.

The American people should demand from President Johnson forthright outlines of our objective in Viet Nam. It should include a realistic estimate of the time that the United States must remain in that country in the event of military "victory".

Korea demonstrated that the United States can conclude a fight without winning.

Cuba demonstrated that the United States can and must tolerate Communism next door indefinitely.

What are we being taught in Viet Nam?
We should demand an answer.

SELECTMEN RECEIVE LETTER OF PRAISE

The following is a copy of a letter received by the Board of Selectmen of Mattapoisett:

As a regular summer resident of Mattapoisett I would like to make a comment or two about your area.

In the first place, thanks to the wisdom of your town officials, and with the cooperation of the homeowners, Mattapoisett is today a most gracious and pleasing community that looks as if it had just stepped out of one of "Grandma Moses" better paintings. Homes are in good repair and all on the same historical plane, lawns are well kept and citizens most kind and courteous.

Square dancing and excellent band concerts in a beautiful setting overlooking the harbor. A most efficient policewoman, Mrs. Ingram, I believe, to keep things under control so that you may have real enjoyment. Chief A. Kinney's competent police force, who always seems to be where they are needed.

Your shopkeepers who try so hard to help you and do so. Your Park custodian with his excellent lawn care, etc. All this and more is your little but big Mattapoisett.

At a time when it seems to be the standard operating procedure to condemn everything

FASHIONS FOR FORGOTTEN WOMEN

Are you fashion's forgotten woman?

Do tasteful clothes turn you on? Do mini-skirts and psychedelic dresses turn you off? Have you recently looked through fashion magazines without seeing anything that you could—or would—buy?

Look again. The picture is changing.

"Fashion is quickly returning to its senses," says the Fall-Winter issue of McCall's Fashionews, a new magazine with a refreshingly different viewpoint. Instead of arty photographs and unwearable fashions, Fashionews presents real clothes, realistically priced, for real women who may not be jetsetters or Twiggies. To this huge audience, it says, "Taste is back. Quality is in."

That's why the little black dress is back, in better form than ever. And the natural waistline, accented by wide belts and dirndl skirts. And the shapelier coat, outstandingly collared. And hats!

There's new zip, too—in zipper-fastened coats and suits, mid-calf coat hemlines warming up for winter, patent platform shoes.

This is the season to put money in "the new jewelry"—accessories. To prove the point, Fashionews takes a $16 pantdress and gives it five different looks for five different fashion types by varying the color, the hemline and the accessories.

Which type are you... the Quick Spender? The Careful Spender? The Big Spender?

The Daring Spender? The Ready Spender? Each type represents a different age, personality, or income group, and Fashionews devotes a big section to each—showing how to adapt the look to you, with fashions that you can find in your area's department stores.

This non-fiction approach to fashion includes the frank opinions of five top designers. Don Simonelli, who designs for Modelia and for STJ knits, believes that it's bad taste to spend a lot of money on clothes!

But whether you're a big spender or a very small one, whether you dare to wear ostrich feathers or stick to tweeds, your good taste is in fashion. You're no longer the forgotten woman.

CAPTAIN CHARLES BRYANT, FIRST

After his plan had received approval in Washington, Captain Bryant returned to Alaska in 1870 and for seven years was the sole authority of the United States to establish law and order in that area. He put his plan in action. The islands were leased to a company which paid for a license to kill seals under restrictions and limits set by the government, i.e., Captain Bryant. This brought revenue to the treasury and also stopped the break in the reproductive life of the seals, not only saving the species but ensuring a continuous industry.

While supervising these operations, Captain Bryant was also improving the living conditions of the Aleuts. Houses were built for them, a civilized community organized, and regular contact between the islands and the mainland established. Captain Bryant also wrote an article on the life of the seals and the sea lions which was published in The History of North American Pinnipeds by Professor J. A. Allen of Harvard.

For the latter years of his stay in Alaska, Captain Bryant's wife and niece (he had no children) journeyed up to live with him. How they endured the winters we can't imagine. The captain reported that the last winter they were there was the coldest for 60 years and the temperature in February averaged four degrees above zero.

Later, while he was living in Mattapoisett, Captain Bryant told hundreds of stories of his years in Alaska. Only one has survived, and that only because it was printed in the New Bedford Standard. It seems a merchant had brought to Captain Bryant a bright and promising boy from Attu, the westernmost of the Aleutian Islands (known to us today as a battleground with the Japanese in World War II). The boy used to call Captain Bryant grandfather, and each day brought his slate to him to practice his writing lessons. The Standard quoted Captain Bryant:

"The Aleuts have very little beard only when quite old. I asked him how old he thought I was. He looked me steadily in the face as if mentally calculating a moment, and then spoke up quickly, saying, 'Three hundred and sixty years.' I asked him to explain. He says his grandfather is sixty years old, and my beard is six times as long as his. Pretty good for a

After serving nearly eight years under three presidents and seven different secretaries of the treasury, Captain Bryant resigned (the new secretary holding completely differing opinions), and with his wife and niece returned to Fairhaven on July 30, 1877. Soon thereafter he moved to Mattapoisett, bought the old

Meigs' tavern, (present Mattapoisett Inn) and lived there with his wife and niece for the next 25 years.

He was a familiar figure about town; older people recall seeing him hoeing in his garden where the Public Library now stands, or in cold weather wearing a long, heavy, black cape. It is doubtful whether anyone ever criticized this piece of apparel. Obviously a man who had spent seven or eight winters in Alaska knew what to wear to keep warm. It is also recalled that once in a great while a Russian lady called on him, someone whose husband he had known well in those far-off days in those far-off islands.

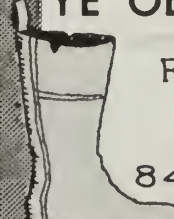

One of the persistent stories about Captain Bryant concerns his supposed memoirs and their mysterious disappearance. According to one version he spent months dictating them; then just before he died, the person who took the dictation quarrelled with him and made off with the whole voluminous manuscript. The other version has it that Captain Bryant wrote his memoirs, but that right after his death a relative absconded with them. Lem Dexter, who used to tell the first version, was positive the memoirs existed. But they have never turned up. If they should, they would prove a major find in American history.

Although he held only one office, Captain Bryant was active in town and civic affairs. That one office was membership on the School Committee, and it was in this capacity that he made his well-known remark in Town Meeting. The time was the late 1880's when the little one room schoolhouses in the more remote sections of the town, due to declining enrolments, were being closed down. The School Committee had voted to close the Tinkhamtown school, and in Town Meeting someone criticized the action. Captain Bryant arose and defended the Committee by not only citing the figures showing fewer and fewer pupils, but by saying that he had personally consulted with each family in the school district, and had come to the conclusion that there would not be any more children in that area.

It is pleasant to think of this outstanding and remarkable and kindly man who had sailed the Atlantic and the length and breadth of the Pacific, who had spent years of his life off and on the stormy and frozen northwest coast, who had known whalemens and cabinet members and eskimos and senators and captains and crews and lawless raiders and violent killers--always on or near the sea--it is pleasant to think of him looking out each morning over the waterfront where as a boy he had

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Crowley, chairman, and their committee have planned an excellent buffet to kick-off the first meeting of the year.

The meeting is scheduled for 7:00 P.M. with dinner to be served at 8:00 P.M. Dancing will follow a short business meeting.

ASSISTANCE NEEDED FOR GIRL SCOUTING

An important meeting for those interested in the continuance of Girl Scouting in Mattapoisett will be held next Wednesday morning, September 20th, at 9:30 A.M. in the Fellowship Room of the Congregational Church. Any woman is welcome to attend who is interested in furthering character-building and high ideals in tomorrow's women. Especially needed are women who can give a limited amount of time; badge consultants to teach or help teach a specific badge for a period of 4-6 weeks but will have no responsibility for troop management; committee members to assist leaders with telephoning and paper work, planning transportation, and assisting occasionally with meetings.

For those who would like to give assistance in other ways, there is a need for people who would not be working directly with girls. Adults can assist in organizing troops, informing leaders of training opportunities, arranging attendance and, in general, assisting the neighborhood chairman.

Mrs. Young calls the attention of mothers of teenage daughters to the need of teenage girls in grade 9 and above to act as "big sisters" to acquaint new teenagers from Portugal who are in this Teen Newcomers Group, with American ways, and to learn from them the folk dances and music of their country. Mrs. Young invites mothers to call her for further information about this program that is being introduced. The group will meet on Mondays from 3:30 to 4:30.

ASIAN INFLUENZA PREDICTED THIS WINTER

An outbreak of Asian influenza this winter is predicted by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health.

Dr. Alfred L. Frechette, Commissioner, said that protection is best achieved through vaccination against the disease which is expected to appear shortly after the Christmas holiday season.

Dr. Nicholas J. Fiumara, Director of the Department's Division of Communicable Diseases, said that only two shots of bivalent flu vaccine are needed for adequate immunization. The first should be given in early September followed by a second injection from four to six weeks later. Persons immunized since 1963 need only a booster injection. Immunization, however, should be completed well before Christmas.

The Department recommends that individuals consult their family physician for protection needed against the flu.

Dr. Fiumara said that protection against flu was particularly necessary for those people who may be classified in the following category: a. Persons 50 years old or over, b. Persons employed or residing in nursing, convalescent or rest homes, c. Persons of any age who are chronically ill with heart and circulatory diseases, respiratory diseases, diabetes or kidney disorders.

The illness, if uncomplicated, generally lasts less than five days with patients complaining of headaches, tearing of the eyes, nasal discharge, sore throat and generalized aches and pains.

Dr. Fiumara said that although flu vaccine is only 60 per cent effective in preventing Flu strikes at all age levels of the population, generally without complications to children and healthy adults. The disease, although not deadly, often paves the way for other respiratory infections such as pneumonia.

Dr. Fiumara said that a high degree of absenteeism could be expected in schools and industry when flu strikes the community.
